The success of the Material Services Division at AMES is attributed to knowledge of aging aircraft and being prepared for upcoming maintenance requirements. This can be through consignment, tear down, or repaired parts. Barry began his Material Services career as a Store Keeper and worked through various sales positions. This career path equipped Barry with an extensive knowledge of aircraft parts that provides the leadership to this team and unsurpassed service to his customers.

Barry resides on his family farm in Sabina, Ohio with his wife Mary Ann where they raise corn and soybeans. They are the parents of five children, nine grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. Barry has served as an Elder for the Sabina Church of Christ for more than 11 years and enjoys being part of a small farm community.

About Kerri Crowley

Kerri Crowley began working at her parent's aircraft parts distribution company at 12 years old. By the time she left for college, she had performed an array of functions, including receiving, picking orders from stock, packing and shipping. Motivated by a desire for social justice, she studied criminology at FSU. After graduation, she went to work as a PI. Her skills as an investigator landed her a job at Allstate where she spent 18 years honing her analytical and decision-making skills, eventually moving into management. In 1999, she returned to Air Parts & Supply Company (APSCO) after losing her mother to brain cancer. From quoting customers, to ordering parts and entering orders, she worked in many positions before gravitating to quality and export compliance. Working in the highly regulated field of insurance equipped her with the needed skills to develop APSCO's first QMS, achieving ISO 9001:2000 certification in 2003. The company's ISO certification spurred growth internationally, which prompted her to tackle export control and creation of the company's first export compliance program. Come January 2018, Kerri will take over as General Manager, a challenge she welcomes because it will allow her to continue doing something she loves with people she really enjoys.
